

PREFACE

The present issue of the Review of the National Center for Digitization contains 11 papers presented during the The Ninth SEEDI Conference: Digitization of cultural and scientific heritage, held in Belgrade, Serbia, May 15-16, 2014. Following the previous SEEDI-meetings, this conference gathered representatives of most of the countries supporting the SEEDI-initiative. Two distinguished guests and invited speakers, Jennifer Edmond from the Trinity college Dublin, and Frank Boochs from the University of applied sciences Mainz, contributed very much to the success of the conference.

Despite the tragic events caused by the great flood that hit Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina, during the meeting 40 presentations were given. Some of the authors submitted their manuscripts from which, after the usual blind review process, this volume of the journal was formed. In my opinion, the credit for this issue goes to the authors of the submitted papers and the referees for their careful reading of the manuscripts, and I – as the guest editor – would like to express my deepest appreciation for their effort.

I am particularly grateful to Ms Marija Šegan who was responsible for technical aspects of organization of the conference, and who did her job thoroughly. Finally, special thanks go to the Central European Initiative, Ministry of education, science and technological development and Center for the Promotion of Science of the Republic of Serbia for their support.

I look forward to the next SEEDI conference.
